Shot Six Times.

AN EXTRAORDINARY ASSAULT UPON A YOUNG MAN BY HIS INTIMATE PERSONAL FRIEND.

About a month ago a young man named Charles Brown engaged a room and board for himself in a boarding-house at the corner of Bedford avenue and Lynch street, Brooklyn, E. D. He had come from one of the western States, he said, and was employed as a painter in a carriage factory close by. After he had been in the house a couple of weeks he introduced to Mrs. Jennette Weaving, the landlady, a fellow-workman named William Carter, who also became a boarder. The two young men roomed together on the third floor of the house. Both kept good hours, and so far as was known refrained from the use of intoxicating beverages. Brown was a bright, chatty little fellow, of about nineteen, soon became an established favorite. Carter, on the other hand, who was Brown's senior by a few years, was of a taciturn disposition and made no friends. The two young men, however, were strangely attached to each other, apparently, and were always together.

Last, after remaining in the dining-room for a while, they went up-stairs early, as usual, Brown bidding a cheery "good-night" to those who remained. A few moments afterward six pistol-shots were heard in quick succession, and the landlady's sons, Charles and Thomas Weaving, left the dining-room hastily to ascertain the cause of the unusual sounds. As they started up-stairs they heard young Carter cry out: "Help! oh, help! I'm killing him!" On the third floor the two brothers saw Carter lying at the head of the stairs with a smoking revolver in his right hand, while Brown lay bleeding in the passageway. When Carter saw the brothers he drove them down stairs by threatening to shoot them, and made a bold dash for the hall door.

STRUGGLING FOR LIBERTY.

The Weaving boys, however, who are both young men of stalwart physique, grappled with him at the door, and wrestled with him for fully ten minutes till a couple of police officers came up and took Carter into custody. It was then found that Brown had been shot six times. One of the bullets was lodged in his right temple, one in his left arm-pit, one in the top of his head, one in his right arm, one in his left hip, while the sixth grazed his right breast and glanced off. The revolver with which Carter did the shooting was a twenty-two calibre seven-shotter.

At the Flushing-avenue station-house Carter was as taciturn as he had been at the boarding-house. When asked why he shot Brown, he replied in a gruff tone, "Because he handled me roughly," and no further explanation could be procured from him. Brown was taken to St. Catherine's Hospital, on Bushwick avenue. He was too weak to talk much, but when questioned he said very positively that he had given Carter no provocation, and that he was unable to account for the sudden attack made upon him. The people in the boarding-house said that the two young men were now known to quarrel, and that as they never went out after they had eaten their evening meal, they do not think it possible that there is any feminine influence at the bottom of the trouble. Brown's condition late last night was very bad, but in spite of the fact that he is fairly peppered with shots from Carter's revolver, the doctors think it possible that he may recover.—New York Herald.
